Global Disinformation Index Language https://disinformationindex.org/the-index/

THIS CAN BE IN ONE PART OF THE SITE.

Websites have financial incentives to spread disinformation, in order to increase their online traffic and, ultimately, their advertising revenue. Meanwhile, the dissemination of disinformation has disruptive and impactful consequences. To combat ad-funded disinformation, the Global Disinformation Index (GDI) deploys its assessment framework to rate news domains' risk of disinforming their readers. These independent, trusted and neutral ratings are used by advertisers, ad tech companies, and platforms to redirect their online ad spending, in line with their brand safety and disinformation risk mitigation strategies.

The GDI risk rating provides information about a range of indicators related to the risk that a given news website will disinform its readers by spreading these adversarial narratives. A site's overall risk rating is based on that site's aggregated score across all the indicators, and ranges from zero (maximum-risk level) to 100 (minimum-risk level). The rating is not an attempt to identify and label disinformation sites or trustworthy news sites. Rather, GDI's approach is based on the idea that a combined set of indicators can reflect a site's overall risk of carrying disinformation. The ratings should be seen as offering initial insights into a country's media market and its overall levels of disinformation risk, along with the strengths and challenges the sites might face in mitigating disinformation risks.
